BRITISH pop star Rita Ora has made a surprise visit to a local bottle shop in Mosman.

The Voice coach stepped into Dan Murphy's where she stopped for photos and chatted to staff, who were excited to see her browsing the tequila section.

Store manager Neil Cairns told The Daily Telegraph the Bang Bang singer (inset) was very down to earth.

"Rita was an absolute delight," he said.

"We chatted a bit about London, as I'm from the UK too ... She said she would be back, and we can't wait to have her visit Dan Murphy's Mosman again."

The 30-year-old starlet has been living in a five-bedroom, waterfront Mosman rental since arriving in Australia with her sister Elena last month to film Channel 7's new season of

The Voice. She performed at Nova's Red Room this month, where she told fans she's enjoying her time here.

"I never want to leave. It's so beautiful here for so many reasons," she said.

Ora has been busy filming reality singing show The Voice alongside country singer Keith Urban, Guy Sebastian and Jessica Mauboy.
